King of the Mountains. A madman has made himself a cave on the mountains south of Ashland, Pa., and, calling himself"King of the Mountains,"and will allow no person to advance within fifty yards of his strange residence. His name is Joseph Minnick. He resided at Ashiand a number of years and is well-known throughout the county. Minnick's insanity was first discovered in 1886, when he attempted suicide, throwing himself across the railroad track before a passenger train, but was resound by two work man after a sebut was rescued by two workmen after a severe struggle. He was then taken to the city station house, which he set on fire, and was badly burned and almost sufficienced. He was removed to the State Asylum, but fourtsen moved to the State Asylum, but fourteen months ago managed to escape, and walking from Harrisburg to Ashland, a distance of ninety miles, stepped into his home, and announced to his astonished wife and children that he had come back to stry. A few days later he became violent and was returned to the State institution. Recently returned to the State institution. Recently he made a second escape, again came to Ashland on foot, visited his home and took

Three days a o a party of berry pickers come upon him very suddenly. As soon as he saw them he commenced veiling, which caused the women to drop their backets and five for their lives. They notified a number of men of their duc very, who started for the "King's" cave. But they had not proceeded far before they were confronted by that individual, who, brandishing a huge knife, commanded them to depart at once or abide by the result.

knife, commanded them to depart at once or abide by the result.

On Thursday he appeared at Washington Park in an almost nude condition and put to flight a large crowd that was present. He then disappeared in the woods and has not been seen since. Much excitement prevails and it is feared that he will do considerable harm before he is captured. Several attempts have been mide to reach his cave, but each time he has detected them and grows more furious at each effort. A posse of citizens is being organized with a view of making a raid on the cave at night to arrest the would-be King of the Mountains and salely lodge him in the asylum from which he escaped.
